President Stands by Port Deal

Takeover by Arab-owned firm worries key lawmakers

WASHINGTON | Brushing aside objections from Republicans and Democrats alike, President Bush endorsed the takeover of shipping operations at six major U.S. seaports by a state-owned business in the United Arab Emirates. He pledged to veto any bill Congress might approve to block the agreement.

The president on Tuesday defended his administration's earlier approval of the sale of London-based Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. to Dubai Ports World, despite concerns in Congress it could increase the possibility of terrorism at American ports.

Bush

Bush sought to quiet a political storm that has united Republican governors and Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist with liberal Democrats including Sens. Hillary Rodham Clinton and Charles Schumer of New York. Frist threatened to introduce legislation to put the sale on hold if the White House did not delay the takeover.

To assuage concerns, the administration disclosed some assurances it had negotiated with Dubai Ports. For example, it required mandatory participation in U.S. security programs to stop smuggling and detect illegal shipments of nuclear materials; roughly 33 other port companies participate in these voluntarily.

Bush said that protesting lawmakers should understand his approval of the deal was final. TED BRIDIS (AP)

COLLAPSES

If the Roof is a-Fallin', Don't Be a-Knockin'

An overweight couple caused the ceiling of a Taunton, England, bar to collapse after they were together in a shower on the floor above, Sky News reported. The two had checked into the inn and spent the afternoon drinking in the bar. They then went upstairs and got in the shower; not long after, the ceiling of the bar became damaged and water began to flood down into the room. The next morning, the ceiling totally collapsed, causing $8,000 in damage. "We could hear them in the shower. They were pretty loud, and all the regulars found it pretty funny at first," landlord Steve Ball said. "But then a torrent of water started pouring." (EXPRESS)

I'm Sorry. May I Have The Money, Please

Sometimes a simple "no" will deter robbers. A Hesperia, Calif., convenience store clerk was confronted Feb. 13 by an armed would-be thief who demanded money from the cash register, said San Bernardino Co. police spokeswoman Roxanne Walker. "The clerk explained that she couldn't do that, and that there were other employees inside the store. The suspect then said 'thanks' and left the store on foot without taking any money or items," Walker said. The man is also suspected in a later robbery of another store. (AP)

Wait, Land in Iowa Costs Money?

An offer of free land prompted more than 1,200 hits in two weeks on the Web site of Marne, Iowa. "It snowballed," said mayor Randy Baxter. The land giveaway is the first step in the process of increasing the town's population from 149 to 200 in the next four years. Interest in the offer has ranged from New York to California, Baxter said. "It's been from a wide range of people," he said. "Singles, couples, young families and retired people." The type of housing to be built on the land has not been decided. (AP)

High Court to Review Abortion Law

Justices will revisit measure that bans late-term procedures

WASHINGTON | The Supreme Court said Tuesday it would consider reinstating a federal ban on what opponents call partial-birth abortion, pulling the contentious issue back to the high court on conservative Justice Samuel Alito's first day.

Alito could well be the tie-breaking vote when the court decides if doctors can be jailed for performing the abortion procedure.

It is the first time the court has considered a federal restriction on abortion, and conservatives said they expect the membership change to affect the outcome.

Justices split 5-4 in 2000 in striking down a state law barring the same procedure because it lacked an exception to protect the health of the mother. Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who was the tie-breaking vote, retired late last month and was replaced by Alito.

Abortion was a major focus in the fight over Alito's nomination, and that of new Chief Justice John Roberts. Neither divulged how he would vote.

faculty make it infeasible for me to advance the agenda of renewal that I see as crucial to Harvard's future," Summers wrote in a letter posted on the school's Web site.

Summers' move brings to a close the briefest tenure at the school since 1862, when Cornelius Felton died after two years in office.

He became embroiled in several controversies early in his tenure, among them the departure of prominent black studies professors such as Cornel West — who left after a falling out with the university president.

Doctors Delay Execution

Calif. inmate's fate in limbo amid fight over legal, ethical concerns

SAN QUENTIN, CALIF. | The execution of a man convicted of raping and murdering a 17-year-old girl was on hold Tuesday and could be delayed indefinitely because of a court battle and medical ethics questions surrounding the method of lethal injection.

Michael Morales, 46, was supposed to die by lethal injection at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday for torturing, raping and murdering a 17-year-old girl 25 years ago. He was waiting in the "death watch" cell at San Quentin State Prison when the execution was scuttled because two anesthesiologists objected to their involvement on ethical grounds.

Prison officials rescheduled the execution for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and said they would employ a different technique: administering a fatal overdose of barbiturate in lieu of the three-drug cocktail typically used in lethal injections.

U.S. District Judge Jeremy Fogel of San Jose, Calif., approved that plan on Tuesday afternoon, but said the sedative must be administered by a person who is licensed by the state to inject medications intravenously, a group that includes doctors and other medical technicians.

Morales' lawyers said they planned to appeal that decision to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and state officials said late Tuesday afternoon that they were unsure whether they would proceed.

Nathan Barankin, a spokesman for Attorney General Bill Lockyer, said prosecutors and prison officials were meeting "for the purpose of determining whether to go forward with the Morales execution as directed by Judge Fogel, and to consider other options." (AP)

Ex-Sago Mine Foreman Indicted For False Reports

MORGANTOWN, W.VA. | A former Sago Mine foreman was indicted Tuesday on federal charges that he falsified inspection reports at the mine in 2004 and was never certified as a miner or mining foreman.

The 116-count indictment against Robert L. Dennison, 35, is not related to the Jan. 2 explosion that led to the deaths of 12 miners.

Dennison was hired in May 2004 by the mine's former owner and was fired in August of that year after the company learned he was not certified to do safety inspections, according to the indictment. (AP)

Moussaoui Team Seeks Rep. to Testify

Congressman Weldon subpoenaed for terror suspect's penalty trial

ALEXANDRIA, VA. | Defense lawyers for al Qaeda conspirator Zacarias Moussaoui said Tuesday they want to compel a reluctant Pennsylvania congressman to testify at Moussaoui's death-penalty trial.

Moussaoui's lawyers had subpoenaed Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa.,

to testify for Moussaoui's defense, but Weldon asked the court to quash the subpoena. Declaring he didn't want to be used by a "thug" like Moussaoui, Weldon claimed congressional immunity from the subpoena.

Weldon has claimed the government knew more about the Sept. 11 hijackers before the 2001 attack than it has publicly admitted.

Specifically, he claims a secret military intelligence project known as Able Danger identified some of the hijackers well before they flew planes into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

How much the government knew about the hijackers before the Sept. 11 attack will be a key issue at Moussaoui's sentencing.

3 Men Charged in Iraq Plot

Suspects accused of planning attacks on U.S. military abroad

CLEVELAND | Three Muslim men from the Middle East were charged Tuesday with plotting terrorist attacks against U.S. and coalition troops in Iraq and other countries.

One of the men, a citizen of both the United States and Jordan, was also accused of threatening to kill or injure President Bush.

All three had lived in Toledo and were arrested over the weekend.

"This case stands as a reminder of the need for continued vigilance in the war on terrorism," Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said in Washington.

The federal indictment does not specify whether any attacks were imminent but says the suspects recruited others to train for holy war against the United States and its allies in Iraq.

The three pleaded not guilty

Rumsfeld Backs Down On Planted News Claim

Says he doesn't know whether payments to Iraqi media have ended

WASHINGTON | Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said Tuesday that the Pentagon is reviewing its practice of paying to plant stories in the Iraqi news media, withdrawing his earlier claim that it had been stopped.

Rumsfeld told reporters he was mistaken in the earlier assertion.

"I don't have knowledge as to whether it's been stopped. I do have knowledge it was put under review. I was correctly informed. And I just misstated the facts," Rumsfeld said at a Pentagon news briefing.

Rumsfeld had said in a speech in New York last Friday and in a television interview the same day that the controversial practice had been stopped.

Donald Rumsfeld briefs the press on planted stories in Iraqi media Tuesday.

He said that Gen. George Casey, the top U.S. commander in Iraq, was reviewing the practice. Previously, Casey has said he saw no reason to stop it.

Rumsfeld last week raised the issue as an example of the U.S. military command in Iraq seeking "non-traditional means" to get its message to the Iraqi people in the face of a disinformation campaign by the insurgents. ROBERT BURNS (AP)

School Board in Pa. Drops Global Learning Program

PITTSBURGH | An internationally recognized educational curriculum has been eliminated by the school board in an affluent suburb despite an outcry from parents and students.

The Upper St. Clair school board voted 5-4 Monday to cut the International Baccalaureate Programme, whose curriculum some school board members have alleged is liberal and anti-American.

Others have questioned the need for the program, run by the Geneva-based International Baccalaureate Organization, saying it's too costly. The district has said it costs about $85,000 annually.

The program is offered at more than 1,700 schools in 122 countries, including 677 schools in the United States.

About 700 of the district's 4,200 students participate in the IB program. (AP)

Attack on Baghdad Market Kills 22

Car bombing in Shiite corner of capital is worst assault in weeks

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | A car bomb exploded Tuesday on a street packed with shoppers in a Shiite area of Baghdad, killing 22 people and wounding 28, police said. It was the deadliest bomb attack in the Iraqi capital in a month.

Terrified children screamed and several women wailed for their dead, crying, "the terrorists, may God punish them." Shattered bits of fruits and vegetables from vendors' pushcarts lay scattered on the street amid pools of blood.

At least eight other people were killed and more than 30 injured Tuesday in bombings and shootings elsewhere in Baghdad and in attacks on beauty parlors and liquor stores — symbols of Western influence — in Baqouba.

The car bombing occurred shortly before 5 p.m. in a Shiite corner of Dora, a predominantly Sunni Arab district of Baghdad and one of the most dangerous parts of the city — rocked almost daily by bombings, ambushes and assassinations.

Large-scale attacks against civilians have declined in recent weeks amid widespread public criticism, including from Sunnis clerics and others sympathetic to the Sunni-dominated insurgency.

Some Sunni insurgent groups are believed to be holding back to give Sunni Arab politicians a chance to negotiate concessions from Shiites and Kurds during talks on a new government.

However, talks among parties have bogged down because of fundamental differences among Shiite, Sunni Arab and Kurdish politicians.

On Tuesday, British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw lent his voice to international calls for a broad-based government, telling Iraqi leaders in Baghdad that "no party, no ethnic or religious grouping can dominate" the next government.

Straw's comments followed a blunt warning Monday by U.S. Ambassador Zalmay Khalilzad that Iraqis risk losing international support if key ministries end up in the hands of politicians with ties to militias. ROBERT H. REID (AP)

Museveni Warns on 'Meddlers'

Ugandan leader blasts foreign influence in final campaign speech

KAMPALA, UGANDA | President Yoweri Museveni warned Ugandans on Tuesday not to be influenced by foreign meddlers, in a speech that closed an election campaign criticized by human rights groups for government harassment of the opposition.

Opinion polls suggest Museveni, who has ruled Uganda for 20 years and changed the constitution so that he could run for a third term, could have difficulty capturing a majority in Thursday's vote, Uganda's first multiparty election in 26 years.

Museveni went on to tell 12,000 supporters at his final rally that he would not let opposition members of parliament keep him from doing what he thinks best for Uganda. He said he would also reject attempts by foreigners to influence him.

"Henceforth, we shall not listen to anybody when it comes to vital matters like defense, like energy, like roads, like politics," Museveni said. "I am glad that my people here have seen the mistake of listening to foreign meddlers."

War Crimes Fugitive Mladic Allegedly Found

BELGRADE, SERBIA-MONTENEGRO | Gen. Ratko Mladic, the fugitive Bosnian Serb commander accused of orchestrating Europe's worst massacre of civilians since World War II, has been located in Serbia and authorities are negotiating his surrender, security officials said Tuesday.

Mladic, considered the most ruthless commander of the Balkan wars of the 1990s, "has not yet been arrested," one official who is close to the operation to find Mladic told The Associated Press. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Serbia is under intense pressure from the European Union and the U.S. to capture Mladic.

Mladic

But Srdjan Djuric, spokesman for Prime Minister Vojislav Kostunica, told the AP in a statement that Mladic had not been arrested.

There have been numerous incorrect reports in the past that Mladic had been located or captured. DUSAN STOJANOVIC (AP)

Aristide Talks of Returning to Haiti

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA | Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the Haitian leader ousted two years ago in a bloody coup, said in an interview with South African state television Tuesday he wants to return home from his exile following the election of his former protege, Rene Preval, as president.

The U.S. and other countries have warned Aristide's return could destabilize the Caribbean country as it tries to emerge from years of violence and poverty. (AP)

Rescue Workers Make Little Progress on Trapped Miners

Rescue workers searching for 65 coal miners trapped deep beneath the desert scrub of northern Mexico made excruciatingly slow progress Tuesday, working with picks and shovels as anguished relatives demanded information. More than two days after a gas explosion filled tunnels with fallen debris, rescuers have found no sign of the workers — either dead or alive — in the Pasta de Conchos mine. (AP)

Violence Among Christian, Muslim Mobs Leave 24 Dead

Christian and Muslim mobs rampaged through two Nigerian cities, killing at least 24 people in violence that followed deadly protests against caricatures of the Prophet Muhammad over the weekend. In Onitsha, Christian mobs burned two mosques and beat to death at least six Muslims, residents and witnesses said. (AP)

Egypt Rebuffs U.S. on Aid to Hamas

Foreign minister urges giving group 'time' before cutting off funds

CAIRO, EGYPT | Egypt's foreign minister said Tuesday it would be premature to cut off international aid for a Palestinian government, even if Hamas is at its helm, dashing Bush administration hopes for a unified front as Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice stood stiffly at his side.

"We should give Hamas time,"

Foreign Minister Ahmed About Gheit said. "I'm sure that Hamas will develop, will evolve. We should not prejudge the issue."

That was not the message Rice had hoped to hear on her trip to Egypt, an important U.S. ally and Arab powerbroker. The U.S. has praised Egypt for telling Hamas it must moderate its views after its win in the Palestinian election.

"If the new Palestinian government led by Hamas is going to be able to meet the aspirations of the Palestinian people for a peaceful life ... it goes without saying that you cannot have one foot in the camp of terror and the other foot in the camp of politics," Rice said during a sometimes raucous press conference with Gheit.

Rice and Gheit interrupted one another, politely at first, but later with an edge. When Rice called the case of jailed political opposition figure Ayman Nour one of Egypt's setbacks, Gheit's face tightened.

"Due process has been applied," Gheit said coolly.

Iran Cool To Latest Nuke Talks

Russia meetings end amid claims Tehran is stalling over sanctions

MOSCOW | A top Iranian negotiator on Tuesday said "constructive" nuclear talks in Moscow offered hope of ending a diplomatic stand-off, but some Russians voiced concern that Iran was using the talks to stall for time and avert international sanctions.

The talks centered on a Kremlin compromise proposal that calls for uranium for Iran's nuclear energy program to be enriched in Russia to prevent it from being diverted for atomic weapons.

"In our belief, the trend of negotiations was positive and constructive," Iran's chief negotiator, Ali Hosseinitash, told state-run Iranian television.

But a senior Russian lawmaker expressed frustration.

"Unfortunately, Iran so far has not shown sufficient good will," Konstantin Kosachev was quoted as saying by news agencies.

The International Atomic Energy Agency is to hold a March 6 meeting that could start a process leading to punishment by the U.N. Security Council, which could impose sanctions on Iran. (AP)

No Sign of Survivors in Philippines

GUINSAUGON, PHILIPPINES | Uncertain if they were even digging in the right place, rescue workers struggled to find a mud-swamped elementary school amid fears that time already may have run out for finding survivors of a massive landslide.

No one has been found alive since just hours after a mountain-side collapsed Friday in a wall of mud and boulders that swamped the farming village of Guinsaugon on Leyte island. The official death toll rose to 107 and officials fear it could surpass 1,000.

High-tech gear detected some underground sounds late Monday, creating a buzz of excitement that survivors could be found. But by Tuesday, the buzz was gone, replaced by a grim workmanlike attitude.

The U.S. Marines, Philippine troops and technicians from Malaysia and Taiwan had to give up digging at the most promising site because the soft, wet mud kept collapsing. (AP)

$200M in Federal Funding for Dulles

Agreement to provide for a fourth runway comes after busy year

CHANTILLY | The federal government has agreed to give Washington Dulles International Airport $200 million to build a fourth runway.

Transportation Secretary Norman Y. Mineta signed a letter of intent Tuesday to provide the funding over 11 years.

"This airport is growing too fast to just tinker around the edges," Mineta said. "If Dulles is to continue to thrive, we must make sure that it can handle more aircraft in a safe, efficient and reliable manner."

A record 27 million passengers went through Dulles last year, placing it among the 20 busiest in the country, Mineta said.

The fourth runway, expected to be completed in the middle of 2008, will allow Dulles — under certain weather conditions — to handle up to 50 percent more flights per hour.

The project is also expected to help more planes land in bad weather, and help reduce delays at other airports, Mineta said.

Airport improvement funds from the Federal Aviation Administration are helping pay for the project. Airports from across the country apply for money from the trust fund. (AP)

Va. Man's Sentencing Delayed

Judge orders probe on use of surveillance in case against Abu Ali

ALEXANDRIA | The government must disclose whether it used any information derived from the Bush administration's warrantless surveillance program in its case against a Virginia man who joined al-Qaida and plotted to assassinate the president, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Gerald Bruce Lee has postponed the sentencing of Ahmed Omar Abu Ali, 24, of Falls Church, at the request of defense lawyers who suspect that Abu Ali was illegally targeted by the eavesdropping program.

In a ruling made public Tuesday, Lee ordered that prosecutors obtain and submit an under-oath declaration from a government official with knowledge of the program to say whether any information from the surveillance program was used directly or indirectly in the Abu Ali case. He gave the government a March 9 deadline to respond.

Prosecutors had opposed any sentencing delay. They said they were not aware of any evidence obtained through the surveillance program, but conceded they may not know exactly how investigators obtained all the evidence. MATTHEW BARAKAT (AP)

Firefighter Fired Because of Fight At Site of Blaze

LARGO | A Prince George's County volunteer firefighter was fired after a confrontation with other firefighters at the scene of a house fire, officials said Tuesday.

The volunteer, a member of the Kentland Fire Station, was fired Thursday, said Mark Brady, a spokesman for the Prince George's County Fire/EMS Department. The department does not release names in personnel matters, Brady said.

"Your conduct on the fireground was reprehensible and was done in the presence of the citizens and residents we serve," stated the termination letter.

An internal investigation showed the volunteer argued and fought with Bladensburg volunteer firefighters and rescue-squad members on Feb. 13, while battling a house fire in Landover Hills. (AP)

Teen Held on Bond In Bank Robbery

Charged with forcing kidnapped younger boy to pull off hold-up

UPPER MARLBORO | A teen was ordered held on $300,000 bond Tuesday in a scheme that investigators said used a kidnapped teenager to commit a bank robbery.

Jeremiah Brown Hall, 17, was charged with assault, kidnapping and false imprisonment after a Feb. 8 incident in which, officials said, a 14-year-old was threatened with harm if he did not rob a bank.

He was taken to neighboring Montgomery County and told to hold up a Chevy Chase Bank branch in Bethesda. The younger teen handed a teller a note and implying he had a gun, according to Montgomery police. Officers found him a short time later.

"Montgomery County has obtained a warrant for Hall but it hasn't been exercised because he's in custody," said Michelle Crnkovich, an FBI spokeswoman. The pending charges include conspiracy, kidnapping and bank robbery.

Authorities in the two counties are working with the FBI to determine whether Hall and an unidentified accomplice could be connected to similar kidnappings.

"We are still looking for another suspect who has not been arrested," said Assistant State's Attorney Leslie Andrews Booker. DERRILL HOLLY (AP)

Google Denies Chinese License Error

BEIJING | Google Inc. denied a report Monday that its Chinese-language search engine, which has been criticized for blocking searches for politically sensitive material, is operating without a government license.

The newspaper Beijing News reported that the ICP — or Internet content provider — license listed by Google.cn on its Web site belongs to a Chinese company, Ganji.com. It said the situation has “attracted the attention” of Chinese regulators.

“Google has a partnership with Ganji.com through which Google has the required license to operate Google.cn,” said Google spokeswoman Debbie Frost in a written response to questions about the report.

Google and other foreign competitors are eager to gain a share of China’s fast-growing online industry, the world’s second-largest after the United States, with more than 100 million people online. (AP)

Health Care Costs Projected to Rise

Report says elderly will spend one of every five dollars on medical bills

WASHINGTON | Within a decade, an aging America will be spending one of every five dollars on health care, according to government analysts who see no end to increases in the cost of going to the doctor and taking medicine.

The nation’s total health care bill by 2015: more than $4 trillion. Consumers will foot about half the bill, the government the rest.

Hospital costs will rise more quickly than previously anticipated, reflecting a construction boom for urban hospitals. Meanwhile, drug costs are expected to be lower, in part, because of the new Medicare prescription drug program.

The projections, published in the journal Health Affairs and written by analysts with the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, attribute rising costs to the aging of the baby-boom population and the changing nature of insurance.

The report forecasts a 7.2 percent annual increase in health care costs over the coming decade. That’s in line with the 7.4 percent increase in 2005.

Still, the overall economy is projected to grow at a rate of only 5.1 percent over the coming decade, which means health care will play an ever-growing role.

The country’s aging population is expected to drive increases in two key areas of health care spending: nursing homes and home health.

Spending on nursing homes will grow from $121.7 billion in 2005 to $216.8 billion in 2015.

Cohen Saves Best for Last

American star grabs slim lead in the figure skating short program

FIGURE SKATING | Sassy Sasha Cohen saved the best for last. And boy was it good.

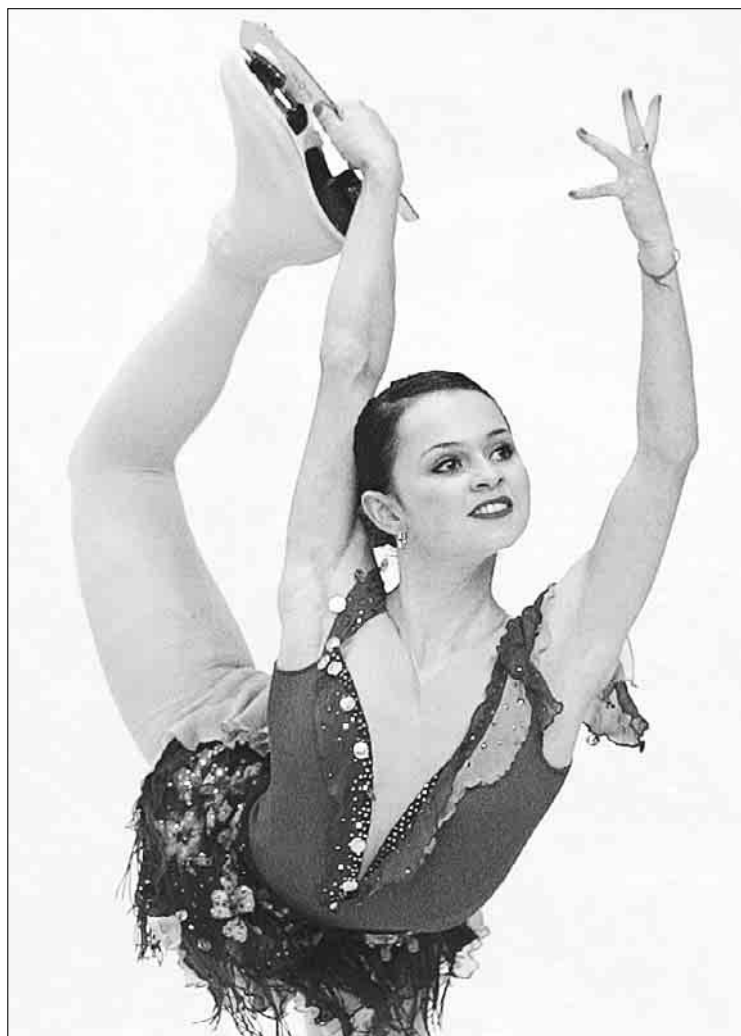

With U.S. flags waving and chants of "USA! USA!" rocking the arena, the U.S. champion dazzled the judges with a sensational short program Tuesday night and slipped past world champion Irina Slutskaya of Russia by a slim .03 points.

Cohen's spectacular spirals and crisp footwork had the crowd clapping to the beat of "Dark Eyes," a Russian folk tune.

She even flashed some attitude as she concluded a solid evening of skating that will wrap up with Thursday night's free skate, snapping her fingers and double-pumping her fists as if to say, "Top that."

"I just believed in myself," Cohen said. "To have something like this come out is really great. I am going to believe in myself and expect the best."

She got the marks she felt she deserved — and the United States has yet another women's gold in sight. Americans have won three of the last four Olympic titles, and if Cohen, a two-time world silver medalist, is this dynamic in the finale, she could add another one.

Cohen's short program has her in first place heading into Thursday's free skate.

Japan's Shizuka Arakawa and Fumie Suguri were third and fourth, and American Kimmie Meissner was fifth. Emily Hughes, added to the U.S. team nine days ago when Michelle Kwan withdrew with a groin injury, finished seventh.

Shauna Rohbock, a U.S. soldier, won the silver in the bobsled on Tuesday.

Rohbock Wins Silver In Bobsled

BOBSLED | Shauna Rohbock shivered as she grabbed the American flag and draped it around her shoulders, temporary shelter from the frosty mountain air.

This wasn't any U.S. athlete using the Stars and Stripes as a prop in some post-race celebration for TV. This was a proud American soldier. And now, Olympic medalist.

"It's an amazing thing to win a medal for your country," said Rohbock.

Blasting down an Alpine slide in a shiny, dark American convertible, Rohbock won a silver medal in women's bobsled on Tuesday, finally ending an 0-for-Olympics stay for the U.S. sliding teams.

With roommate Valerie Fleming providing the push and applying the brakes, Rohbock completed her four runs down the track faster than everyone but gold-medal winners Sandra Kiriasis and Anja Schneiderheinze of Germany.

Rohbock got dumped from her the second U.S. bobsled four years ago, and not long after that, she was nearly deployed to Iraq as a member of the Utah National Guard.

She had packed her bags, ready to serve her country when a torn rotator cuff — the result of an old soccer injury — kept her home and eventually landed her back behind the controls of a bobsled. "Luckily for me," she said. "I thought I was done." TOM WITHERS (AP)

U.S. Backs Into Hockey Quarterfinals

As team finally finds its offense, the defense falters in loss to Russia

HOCKEY | Brian Rolston's shot bounced off the goalie, struck the crossbar and sent a water bottle flying on its way into the net.

Needing all that effort for one goal, who knows what it will take to lift the U.S. men's hockey team to Olympic victory. Trouble is, the club has only one more chance to figure it out.

Rolston scored one of the

One of five goals let in by U.S. defense.

Americans' three power-play goals Tuesday, but on a night they finally found their offense, the defense and goaltending wasn't up to par in a 5-4 loss to Russia. "It's more maddening than anything else," coach Peter Laviolette said.

After managing only two goals in two consecutive losses, the U.S. team broke out in a game that could only serve them in the confidence department. It didn't quite work out that way.

The Americans (1-3-1), the fourth-place team in Group B, were already locked into a quarterfinal matchup Wednesday with Group A-winning Finland (5-0). The Russians (4-1) will face Canada (3-2). IRA PODELL (AP)

Details of Drug Raid Revealed

DOPING | The scandal surrounding disgraced Austrian ski coach Walter Mayer deepened Tuesday as team officials said two Olympic athletes may have engaged in "illegal methods" and potentially damaging new details emerged about what was seized in a surprise raid on the team's living quarters.

It was revealed that evidence seized in the weekend raids included unlabeled drugs, a blood transfusion machine and dozens of syringes, including some in Mayer's residence.

And Austrian ski federation president Peter Schroecksnadel said that two athletes who bolted the games after the raids had confessed to a team official that they "may have used illegal methods." (AP)

U.S. Rivals Lash Out After Defeat

Italian surprises with gold in speedskating over Davis, Hedrick

SPEEDSKATING | Shani Davis got the best of Chad Hedrick, though it wasn't good enough for gold. Then they both took the Olympics' hottest rivalry to a whole new level.

These guys really don't like each other. That much they could shake on.

While Italy's Enrico Fabris was becoming an Olympic hero in his home country, upsetting the Davis-Hedrick showdown with a victory Tuesday in the 1,500 meters, the most compelling storyline was the two American favorites who settled for silver and bronze.

Davis, the runner-up, and Hedrick, a disappointing third, were forced to spend an uncomfortable half-hour in a brightly lit room that might as well have been the scene of an interrogation.

Finally, the truth came out.

Davis was still mad that Hedrick didn't shake his hand after Davis' victory Saturday in the 1,000. This time, Hedrick did offer his congratulations, but that clearly was too late to soothe Davis' feelings.

"I'll be honest with you," said Davis. "Sure, Chad and I are fighting for the same thing. But it would have been kind of nice after I won the 1,000 if he would have been a good teammate and shook my hand."

With that, Davis jumped out of his seat and stormed from the room, mumbling, "Shakes my hand when I lose. Typical Chad."

Now sitting alone at the podium, Hedrick didn't back down. He said he was upset that Davis wouldn't take part in the team pursuit last week that the U.S. was eliminated from in the quarterfinals.

"We're all part of Team USA," Hedrick said. "We had a great opportunity to win the team pursuit. I felt betrayed in a way. Not only did he not participate, he wouldn't even discuss it with me as a leader of the team. I thought we passed up a medal." PAUL NEWBERRY (AP)

Gary Williams is pleading his case for the Terps to make the NCAA Tournament.

Williams Lobbies For Uneven Terps

Coach hopes to return to NCAA Tournament despite team's off year

TERPS HOOPS | Gary Williams is a perfect fit for this town. The Maryland Terrapins coach could have been a fine lobbyist or a campaign manager.

For weeks now, Williams has been amping up the rhetoric, espousing the virtues of his team and of the Atlantic Coast Conference. He's after those swing voters on the NCAA Tournament selection committee.

The numbers aren't great. His Terps sit a pedestrian 16-9, 6-6 in the ACC after Saturday's overtime victory against a lackluster Georgia Tech team. But he's pleading with them to look beyond the numbers.

"I think one of the things I see wrong, you don't get credit when you're in a good conference for the fact that you're going to lose some games," Williams said. "You're losing against good teams and you're losing at tough places to play. You're losing against great players and great coaches. That's not always true in other conferences."

He has a point. Aside from top-ranked Duke, the other ACC schools have made punching bags of each other. Maryland currently resides in a three-way tie for fourth place, with tonight's opponent, Florida State, and Virginia. Through Sunday, the ACC had the second-highest winning percentage of the Division I conferences and collectively was ranked third, behind the Big Ten and the Big East, in the increasingly important Ratings Percentage Index.

But as any good politician knows, it's the results that count. Maryland needs a strong finish to the regular season and a good run in the conference tournament. Otherwise, on Selection Sunday — the NCAA version of Super Tuesday — the Terrapins will be gathered around a television set, fingers crossed, hoping those swing votes go their way. DEREK TURNER

Tejada Is Contrite in O's Return

ORIOLES | Miguel Tejada walked into the Baltimore Orioles' clubhouse and was greeted by his teammates — one hug at a time.

If any of them harbored any resentment over his offseason criticism of the team's front office and his subsequent request to be traded, it certainly wasn't evident Tuesday, when the Orioles gathered for their first full-squad workout of spring training. "That's in the past. He says he wants to stay here," center fielder Luis Matos said after embracing the All-Star shortstop. "I don't expect him to say he's sorry."

Oh, but Tejada did just that.

He said he told the Latin players, "I felt really embarrassed, because Tejada said he regrets asking for a trade.

I'm not that kind of man. I'm not the kind of person that makes some trouble. Everything is over. Everything is straight."

After the two-hour workout, he told reporters, "It's never going to happen again."

Later he said, "I feel a little upset, people telling me that I don't love the players. I love the players, I love the team, I love everybody here. Everybody knows I made a mistake." DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

The Nationals' 'New Guzie'

Shortstop has laser eye surgery in effort to improve his hitting

NATIONALS | After spending most of last season below the Mendoza Line, Cristian Guzman had his eyes fixed. The first results are promising.

The Washington Nationals shortstop was an early arrival at spring training Tuesday and looked sharp in batting practice, having ditched contact lenses for laser surgery and claiming to be oblivious to the fact that the team has signed a veteran to contend for his job.

"They can bring here Jeter, I don't care," Guzman said. "This is the new Guzie right now."

Royce Clayton isn't exactly Derek Jeter, but he did hit .270 in Cristian Guzman had his worst year at the plate last year for the Nationals.

141 games last season with Arizona — 51 points better than Guzman's career-low .219.

The Nationals signed Clayton to a minor-league deal in case Guzman continues to fall well short of the expected return on the four-year, $16.8 million contract he signed a year ago.

"All I want is Cristian to come out here and be himself," manager Frank Robinson said. "I know he's a better player, a better hitter than the way the performed last year. He put three or four good years together with Minnesota, and that was not a fluke. You don't forget how to hit."

Cars

Hybrid and Mighty

The '07 Camry is the next success story in eco-engined sedans

By certain lights, the 2007 Camry Hybrid is not particularly revolutionary. Styling reminds me of the old Merle Travis song: So round, so firm, so fully packed. The ride and handling are straight-up Pink Floyd: comfortably numb.

But beneath the almost laughably stately sheet metal is a still-slightly radical, state-of-the-art gas-electric powertrain.

Of course, reasonable minds can and do disagree about the real-world cost advantages of hybrid technology, how it may stack up against advanced diesel systems or how perishable hybrid batteries might be. But the Camry Hybrid inarguably tosses this alien, Left Coast technology in the laps of Middle America. After all, this isn't some refugee from "Minority Report." This is the bestselling car in America, seven out of the last eight years, the heart of the market.

And so the Camry Hybrid is deeply subversive, undercutting

It's getting harder for snobby environmentalist types to drive around an overtly green vehicle, now that the popular Camry is taking the technology mainstream.

the automotive-identity politics that have separated hybrid technology from bien-pensant Americans who might otherwise think it's all a plot reeking of patchouli and macrobiotic ice cream.

You could not ask for a more conventional, non-threatening, more American sedan than this. There's nothing rakish or aggressive about the car's new styling, no trick graphics or plunging hood lines. What the Camry is on the inside — safe, reliable, sturdy, bourgeois — it is on the outside. This car is the radon of mid-size exurban transportation: odorless, colorless, invisible.

2007 TOYOTA CAMRY HYBRID

→ POWERTRAIN: Gas-electric hybrid powertrain with a 2.4-liter DOHC Atkinson-cycle gas engine with variable-valve timing and lift; 105 kW permanent magnet synchronous electric traction motor; electronically controlled continuously variable transmission; front-wheel drive

→ WHEELBASE: 109.3 inches

→ LENGTH: 189.2 inches

→ WEIGHT: 3,637 pounds

→ HORSEPOWER: 192 at 6,000 rpm

→ PRICE: $29,995

How does it drive? Quintessentially Camry-like. The Camry moves at a deliberate and unhurried pace — which is to say, it's kind of slow. Although it has enough asphalt savvy for ordinary driving, it's rather yacht-like in its cornering and steering responses. Which makes the fuel economy all the more remarkable.

As such it's the perfect delivery system for Toyota's hybrid marketing strategy, which may be called the mainstreaming of hybrids. Commercial for the Toyota Camry Hybrid — bilingual, no less — debuted during the Super Bowl.

Industry watchers have to push their fedoras back on their heads and let out a low whistle. Toyota has played this game exactly right. The company invested heavily in its Hybrid Synergy Drive, won over early adopters and is now amortizing the technology across its product line, all the while welding a bond in the consumer's mind between Toyota and high-tech fuel economy.

Plus, the Hybrid occupies the top of the Camry pyramid and, so, is loaded to the gills. DAN NEIL (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Car Care

Automotive expert PAT GOSS owns Pat Goss Car World, Inc., a local car repair company. He chats monthly on washingtonpost.com/cars

I have a VW Passat. Occasionally the yellow "ABS" light and the red "brake" light come on. I can't find any regular brake place that can read VW's ABS codes. Is this common in the industry?

It's common that shops might not have VW software.

How long should you warm-up the car on cold mornings?

Unless there are extenuating circumstances, such as lots of ice or snow to defrost, warm up time should be approximately one minute, and then drive gently until the car reaches normal operating temperature.

Lately, my car has been vibrating when stopped. I had a transmission flush performed, which may have helped a bit, and the problem goes away if I put the transmission in neutral. Is this transmission dying, or can it be adjusted?

Check the engine, check the engine mounts and check all tune-up-related items other than the transmission.

The Last of England

Ray Davies and the Arctic Monkeys redefine British rock

MUSIC | The British make rock music the way the Greeks made marble statues.

That's not exactly news, but the release on Tuesday of both Ray Davies' first full-fledged solo album in his four-decade career and the debut by new sensations the Arctic Monkeys puts it in dramatic perspective. It's the alpha and omega of British song, the return of the master dovetailing with a resounding restatement of his legacy.

The two records share essential properties — a Britishness (though Davies' is also informed by his recent New Orleans residency), a sense that they're singing about things that matter, a flair for melody, a ton of attitude and voices that make you care.

For the Monkeys, that's Alex Turner, who starts with a Johnny Rotten snarl but soon eases into a more approachable companion, recalling the messianic early Bowie, who offered a comforting embrace to all the young dudes.

It's easy to see why the band drew a national following with its Internet-disseminated music before it released "Whatever

MUCH WARMER HERE: The Arctic Monkeys, busy saving British pop, don't look out of place far from their native habitat.

People Say I Am, That's What I'm Not" (Domino).

It seems less like something recorded in a studio than an instant crystallization of an intensely experienced life. Set to restive, brittle guitar rock a few notches harder than similarly catchy labelmate Franz Ferdinand's, the Arctic Monkeys undertake an epic prowl, navigating through a night packed with flirtations and confrontations, and ending with the sobering arrival of a cold reality.

Leading the Kinks, Davies churned and seethed like the Monkeys in his British Invasion youth, but it didn't take him long to find a more varied and distinctive musical approach. "Other People's Lives" (V2) never gets downright raucous, but Davies' way with words and his perfect delivery give it one potent moment after another.

The album includes some of his familiar song forms — a comically observed vignette about his neighbors, scathing critiques of crass comedians and tabloid gossip, sentimental character sketches.

Davies still has that way of making his arrangements sound like an effortless, utterly natural environment, as if all the pieces just fell into place and are escorting him into that mixed-up, muddled-up, shook-up world whose poet laureate he remains. RICHARD CROMELIN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Jay Hits the Spotlight

The 'Project Runway' winner takes his scissors to New York

FABULOUS | "Project Jay" (11 p.m., Bravo) allows "Project Runway" fans to catch up with Jay McCarroll, last season's winner.

"Jay" follows the talented McCarroll as he moves out of his parents' house in rural Pennsylvania and attempts to launch his own clothing line in New York City. Jay did not accept the "Runway" prize money and hopes instead to make more coin selling and licensing his own work.

Along the way, he runs into some old "Runway" rivals, including Austin Scarlett and Wendy Pepper. And if finding a New York City retail space and apartment isn't difficult enough, Jay has to drop everything when Heidi Klum asks him to design a dress for the September 2005 Emmy Awards, occurring scant days after the birth of her child.

With all of this on his plate, Jay suffers a serious health emergency that requires immediate and expensive attention. "Project Jay" never reveals who is paying for this free-lancer's medical insurance.

McCarroll maintains his quick wit and singular vision throughout, reminding us why he became a favorite on "Runway" and emerged as one of the more original TV personalities of 2005. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Jay McCarroll was a hoot to watch, but he backs up his appeal with talent.

NO DRESS CODE: The Monty Python crowd at its peak, characteristically dignified.

Enduring Silliness

Monty Python's trademark absurd humor returns to PBS

SKETCHY | Here is the Oxford English Dictionary on the word "Pythonesque": "After the style of, or resembling the humor of, Monty Python's Flying Circus, a popular British television comedy series that first ran from 1969 to 1974 and is noted for its absurdist or surrealist humor." Webster's New Millennium Dictionary of English defines it more particularly as "pertaining to something that is fast-paced, surreal, and following stream-of-consciousness."

Both definitions leave out "silliness," which is perhaps the series' essential quality; maybe "silliness" is too silly a word for a respectable major dictionary.

Still, it's testimony to the lasting effect of the troupe that became known as Monty Python, after the title of their show, and more familiarly the Pythons. The group has also inspired a "Jeopardy" category and a beer, "Monty Python's Holy Grail Ale" ("tempered over burning witches"). A prehistoric species of snake (Montypythonoides riversleighensis) has been named for it, as well as a computer programming language. "Spamalot" has won three Tonys and a Grammy Award, raising the Python profile.

Now, the Pythons return to their spiritual American home, the Public Broadcasting Service, where the "Flying Circus" first aired, beginning on Dallas' KERA in 1974.

Beginning tonight and for the two following Wednesdays, PBS presents "Monty Python's Personal Best," a six-part series that accords an hour each to its six founding members — John Cleese, Michael Palin, Terry Jones, Eric Idle, Terry Gilliam and the late Graham Chapman.

The big news about these shows is that they contain new material — not exactly new Python material — since each of the five surviving members curates, directs and hosts his own "Personal Best" and contributes from a remote location to the Chapman episode, a straightforward memorial documentary interspersed with sketches.

Television

MOUTHING OFF: Those lips, those ... well, lips! Gina Gershon (of "Showgirls" infamy) is bringing her pillowy pucker to NBC as the star of "Lipstick Jungle." She'll play one of three powerful New York businesswomen.

Have Ax , Will Rock

Musicians get to play rock star in TLC's 'Rock 'n' Roll Camp'

DON'T FRET | Some go to summer camp for the fresh air. But where do air guitarists go? Why, to "Rock and Roll Fantasy Camp" (9 p.m., TLC). Musicians with varying degrees of talent practice under the tutelage of Jon Anderson, Dickey Betts, Colin Hay, Nils Lofgren, Bret Michaels, Jane Wiedlin and others. Then, they get to perform live onstage at the House of Blues with Roger Daltrey as their frontman.

Why does this sound like a

At Fantasy Camp, activities include shredding and blowing people's minds.

“Simpsons” episode? Because it was a “Simpsons” episode, with Homer and the gang jamming with the Rolling Stones.

And when television doesn't emulate "The Simpsons," it imitates "Freaky Friday." The new series "Try My Life" (8 p.m., Style) invites a parent and his or her teen to trade places for a couple of days.

The first installment has a tough-talking pest-control contractor living in the soccer shoes of his spoiled teen daughter. She learns a little about hard work when she breaks a nail or two while spraying insecticide in the crawl spaces of suburban homes. While well intentioned, "Try My Life" is nothing you haven't seen three or four times already. KEVIN MCDONOUGH

ON TV TONIGHT

IT'S ALREADY HISTORY?

PUNK: ATTITUDE (7:15 p.m., Independent Film Channel) looks at the music and cultural influence of bands such as the Ramones, The Clash, Sex Pistols and Black Flag.

GUYS ON THE RISE

AMERICAN IDOL (8 p.m., Fox) Let's hear it from the boys on a two-hour episode.

LOOK FOR CLUES

LOST (9 p.m., ABC) returns to its beginnings with a repeat of the 2004 two-hour pilot episode. With a budget of $12 million, this was a huge risk for ABC. Looks like it paid off.

CULT CHOICE

A young model (Angelina Jolie) becomes the toast of the 1970s catwalks before succumbing to drugs

Danger of injuries to women still debated at the Olympic games

Persistently and proudly, women have pushed for equality in the Olympics, even in the riskiest of sports.

A series of frightening crashes this week in downhill skiing and luge highlight the dangers. But rather than scaling back, some women hope to add ski jumping to the games and, in hockey, yearn for permission to bodycheck like the men.

"It's inevitable," U.S. ski jumper Bill Demong said of the eventual entry of women into Olympic jumping — the last all-male bastion in the Winter Games.

"Safety is not an issue (for women) any more than it is for a guy," said Demong, who had a face-first crash four years ago. "They're going to be in condition for their sport."

High-speed sports such as luge and downhill can be dangerous for any athlete, man or woman, yet gender factors unquestionably come into play.

The top women skiers have campaigned to make their courses — including the super-G run in these Winter Games — more challenging.

Yet there is no all-out drive to compete on the men's speed courses, in part because lesser-skilled women in the field might struggle with the big jumps. Medical experts also say women skiers have knee ligament injuries at a far higher rate than men.

Months before the Olympics, several women racers, including top American downhiller Lindsey Kildow, complained that their speed terrain for these games was too monotonous, and some lobbied to have the super-G shifted to the more difficult men's course.

Instead, the women's terrain was altered with larger jumps, more bumps and a few new turns — and Kildow was among three skiers who crashed spectacularly on it during downhill training runs Monday. The women's super-G and downhill are run on the same mountain, but on different courses.

In luge, men and women compete on the same track — and riders of both sexes were involved in dramatic crashes this week on a particularly tough sequence of curves. Some experts suggest the risk is less for the heavier male lugers because their sleds get more traction on the ice, but U.S. luge team spokesman Jon Lundin said the risks are gender-blind and the driving skills more or less equal.

"The bigger, brawnier part is only at the start," he said. "The rest of it is experience." DAVID CRARY (AP)

Generalized Anxiety Disorder Research Study

Comprehensive NeuroScience is participating in a clinical research study for generalized anxiety disorder (GAD). This clinical research study is evaluating the safety and effectiveness of an investigational medication for GAD.

If you:

- Are between the ages of 18-65
- Are experiencing excessive and persistent worry and tension about everyday events
- Have physical symptoms associated with anxiety, such as restlessness, fatigue, irritability, muscle tension, headache, nausea, insomnia or poor concentration
- Are almost always expecting the worst;

You might be eligible to participate in this research trial. Qualified participants will receive study-related health assessments, lab tests, and study medication or placebo at no cost. All information is treated confidentially.

Growing sex-themed college events draw interest and criticism

In a lecture hall on Yale's storied Old Campus, not long after an afternoon astronomy class has cleared out, a middle-aged sex toy saleswoman demonstrated her technique and handed out free products to an eager crowd.

"I want you to close your eyes," Patty Brisben playfully instructed a man as she rubbed scented lotion into his forearm and, to raucous laughter, reached for an electric toy and a glove. "Fantasize about having an all-over body massage."

Welcome to Sex Week at Yale, a biennial celebration that has become one of the most provocative campus events in the country.

Organizers say Sex Week gets students talking about sex in a way that's more relevant than middle-school film strips, more honest than movies and television, and more fun than requisite college health lectures.

"To get people's attention, we do have to do things a little risqué and a little different than other sex education programs," said junior Dain

Lewis, director of Sex Week 2006.

Yale's event, which ended Saturday, included lectures from dating specialists, a sex therapist and a discussion of homosexuality with a former Roman Catholic priest. More provocative sessions included a panel of porn stars and stripping lessons from a Playboy Channel hostess.

Critics say Sex Week is just the latest act of debauchery at colleges in recent years: Students started sex columns. Vassar and others created erotica journals. Harvard launched H-Bomb, a magazine featuring suggestive pictures of undergraduates. Washington University in St. Louis offered a sex-themed week with orgasm seminars and condom telegrams.

"I don't see how bringing a Playboy stripper to campus is helping anything," said Travis Kavulla, editor of the Harvard Salient, which joined other conservative newspapers in giving Sex Week the Collegiate Network 2004 Outrage Award. MATT APUZZO (AP)

A Splash of Style

Things that smell nice can only be topped by things that are pretty. ESTÉE LAUDER has captured both by combining their PLEASURES perfume with a limited-edition bottle designed by Cuban-born artist Ruben Toledo ($58). The funky psychedelic flower garden design gives a touch of class to the dressing table. The scent itself is heady and floral, with a blend of lily and gardenia, and some patchouli mixed in for a subtly darker note. Some noses compared it unfavorably to White Shoulders; others found the classic elements appealing — Pleasures is one of the few feminine, flowery scents that manages not to smell like Grandmother.

MOURNFUL CHIC: The "Black Room" at the Smithsonian's Cooper-Hewitt National Design Museum contains 19th-century riding habits and one seriously wacky tuxedo.

The Rainbow Room features such modern designers as Dolce and Gabbana and Yves Saint Laurent, while more classical shapes — like this 1857 day dress — dominate the Blue Room.

Color Me Stylish

Exhibit showcases the meaning and history of hues

Fashion rules are never written in black or white, and an exhibit at Smithsonian's Cooper-Hewitt National Design Museum in New York examines how color is represented in what we wear and how emotion is represented in color.

"Fashion in Colors" has a black room, a blue room, a red room, a yellow room, a white room and a rainbow room — with both the clothes and the walls dedicated to the same color.

"By having all one color in one room, the color fades and the details pop," says Barbara Bloemink, Cooper-Hewitt's curatorial director.

"Fashion in Colors" opens with black, ranging from an early 19th-century riding habit to a giant ribbon dress from Viktor & Rolf's spring 2005 collection. Black's significance in fashion has changed drastically over time, observes Bloemink. In the 1800s, men wore black to show their conservatism and reliability. In the second half of the 20th century, it came to symbolize society's rebels: beatniks, punks and Goths. Also during the 1900s — through today — black has been the color of elegance.

Blue, on the other hand, has always been a calming color. It's why blue or green are the predominant colors in hospitals, Bloemink notes. Blue, at one time, was a hard color to achieve through dyes and required a complex production process, which is why it was mostly reserved for royalty through the 17th century.

Red was a color worn by women in Latin America centuries ago, when the pigment for the dye came from the crushed bodies of female insects, Bloemink explains, and it was used in Aboriginal paintings in Australia because the sap of the eucalyptus tree also is red.

The color psychology behind red varies. In the West, red is scandalous, while in Eastern cultures, it's a sign of celebration. White also means different things in different places: it's the color of mourning in the East and the color of chastity, purity and innocence in the West. Bloemink notes, however, that brides used to wear brown or light blue. In the 18th and 19th centuries, white became a symbol of childhood and from there came the tradition of the innocent, child-like bride wearing white.

"Fashion in Colors," originally organized by the Kyoto Costume Institute Japan, runs through March 26 at the Cooper-Hewitt and will not travel.

ANDREA BONIOR, PH.D.

Marry the Girl, Not the Family

My girlfriend comes from a very complicated family. Her mother has been married four times and suffers from depression and, most likely, an eating disorder. Her father was an alcoholic for many years and was recently put on probation for stealing money from his company. Both of her siblings have been in and out of bad relationships and one attempted suicide. I really worry about what effect all this has on our relationship. I think she's the person I want to marry, but I also think about having these people as in-laws, or passing on some of their traits to our kids. My girlfriend is a very resilient person, but is it honestly possible for someone to escape from all that untouched? —TOUGH DECISIONS, DC

What does "untouched" really mean, anyway? If we never got treadmarks from our experiences, we'd never learn, grow, or be much different than we were in kindergarten.

You fell in love with your girlfriend for who she is. Presumably, she is that person because of her past, not despite it. Perhaps she even developed her strength and resilience from having such unfortunate luck in the lineage department. If you're worried about genetics, why not worry about being hit by a bus? Even with the heritability of many traits, it's still a crapshoot — we've all seen calm-as-cucumber babies borne of Nervous Nellies, or the J.Crew-catalog parents whose kid has a schnoz the size of Nebraska. So you may get some difficult in-laws, and yes, some Thanksgivings may make you want to cry for mercy. But if your girlfriend is right for you, you won't think twice. Marry her — or not — for who she is. Not where she comes from.

I've been seeing this girl for a couple months and I'm finding that she's pretty high-maintenance. For instance, she likes me to call when I get home from her place, just to let her know I got in OK. If I don't e-mail her at work, she sends text messages asking why she hasn't heard from me. The thing is, my female friends don't think it's that big of deal, so I wonder if I'm over-reacting. —LAID-BACK GUY

To figure that out, you'd need a better idea of what's behind this fun little quirk. It could be many things — anxiety about your safety, an inability to trust you, or even a test of whether you really think it's such a Herculean task to place a good-night call. Maybe you're even exaggerating a bit, because you're sniffing for permission to let her go for other reasons altogether. But boiled down to its essence: She wants something from you. You're either willing to give it or able to compromise — or you decide it's too much and say arrivederci. The question isn't just whether she's high-maintenance, but whether you're willing to be the maintainer.

Skinny Models Not Appealing

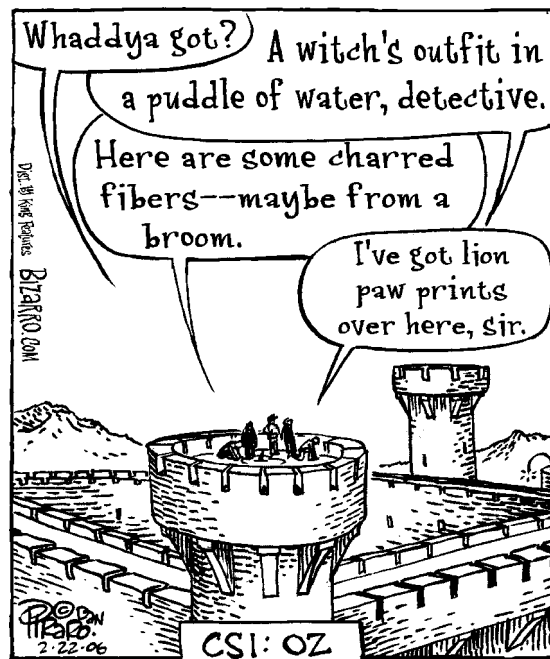

HOW DISAPPOINTING it was to see stick-figure models pictured in the "Styles" section of Tuesday's Express. The lean-and-hungry look is not appealing, and it sends the message that this is something beautiful to which women should aspire. Extreme thinness is unhealthy, and I wish Express would stop choosing to publish photos of skeletal-framed models with knobby knees.

New York Cracks Down On Ruthless Star Thieves

A maid whose clients included Robert DeNiro and Candice Bergen was sentenced Tuesday to one to three years in prison by a judge who said the defendant was "cleaning out" her celebrity employers' valuables while cleaning their homes. New York State Supreme Court Justice Renee White ignored the pleas of a weeping LUCYNA TURK-WAWRYNOWICZ to let her return

Turyk-Wawrynowicz, 35, said. She said her sister died recently, leaving several young children. "They have no one to take care of them," she told the judge. White told the maid she had "shown no remorse for your actions, but only remorse for your predicament," and imposed the prison sentence. (AP)

Metro to Major Exhibitions at The National Gallery of Art

In case you haven't heard, the National Gallery of Art recently opened two landmark exhibitions featuring a renowned artist and avant-garde movement that both have made a lasting impression on the world of modern art. Don't miss your chance to see these inspiring and evocative shows, in town this spring through May.

Cézanne in Provence

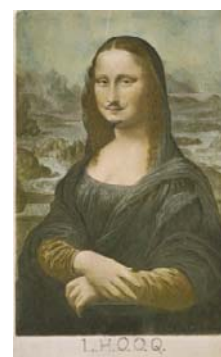

West Building, Main Floor

Cézanne in Provence is the principal international exhibition marking the 100th anniversary of the death of Paul Cézanne (1839-1906). A key figure in the impressionist and post-impressionist movements, Cézanne is often seen as the father of modern art. This exhibition features more than 100 of Cézanne's greatest oil paintings and watercolors, which demonstrate his intense, emotional attachment to the countryside of his birthplace, Aix-en-Provence. Works depict such scenes as Cézanne's family home of Jas de Bouffan, Mont Sainte-Victoire, the Mediterranean coast at L'Estaque, the dramatic quarry at Bibémus and the Château Noir. Exhibit runs through May 7.

forever. The most comprehensive museum exhibition of Dada art ever mounted in the United States, Dada features painting, sculpture, photography, film, collage and readymades emerging in six cities: Zurich, Berlin, Hannover, Cologne, New York and Paris. The exhibition presents many of the most influential figures in the history of modernism, as well as others less known. Exhibit runs through May 14.

Getting There: Metro to Judiciary Sq station on the Red Line, Archives-Navy Mem'l-Penn Quarter station on the Yellow/Green Lines and Smithsonian station on the Blue/Orange Lines. Or plan your visit with Metro's Trip Planner at MetroOpensDoors.com.

Dada

East Building, Upper Level and Mezzanine

One of the crucially significant movements of the historical avant-garde, Dada was born in the heart of Europe in the midst of World War I. In the wake of that brutal conflict, Dadaists raucously challenged tradition, and art making was changed

METRO TIP

Get out your new $10 bills – Metro is upgrading its farecard machines, SmarTrip® machines and bus fareboxes throughout the system to accept the redesigned bill. Most machines should be equipped to accept the new bills when they go into circulation March 2.

Sneak a Peek: Metro to Begin Testing New Rail Cars

Starting February 27 and throughout March, Metro will test new rail cars in preparation for their public debut later this year. An eight-car test train will run from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. beginning on the Green Line, and the new rail cars will eventually be tested on all Metrorail lines.

Passengers will not be able to board the trains during the test period so we'll be able to check the new cars for safety and reliability and make any necessary adjustments.

You can easily spot a test train by looking for decals like the one to the right and checking the train's electronic display or passenger information display signs, which will read "No Passengers."

The new rail cars will feature different seating configurations to make better use of space, and seatback-to-ceiling handrails and wall mounted handrails for easier access.

Keep an eye out for the new rail cars—just one of the many ways Metro is working to improve your trip and get you where you need to go.

HOW TO USE

Apartments.com Directory

A. Location

You'll see that the directory listings in this issue are geographically arranged by state, county and city to make your apartment search easy. There are also an abundance of apartment communities on our display pages that increase your choices in the areas that you are considering.

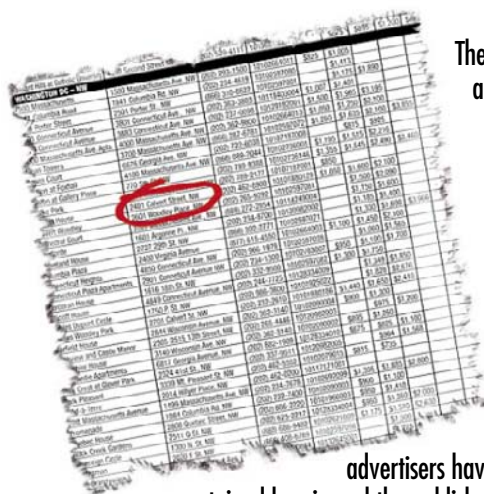

B. Price

Each listing contains the most up-to-date information about the apartment's starting rental rates, its phone number and apartments.com Web #

C. Web ID

Log onto www.washingtonpost.com/apartments, select search by Web # and enter the community Web # number into the search box. There you will find photos, maps, directions, school information, pet policies, features, amenities and much more. There's no better source of the detailed information you need to find the perfect new home than apartments.com

HEY, is that your bag?

If you see someone leave something on a bus, in a train or a station, kindly ask them, "Is that your bag?"

If they don't take it, or if you see any unattended item, please report it to a Metro employee or call Metro Transit Police at 202-962-2121.
